

Clicking delete button next to a row on...

Michael Pavey 49 posts since

Oct 3, 2008

This afternoon I went to change a space that was previously private, accessible only to two people, into a public one. I went onto the Permission Summary screen (cf. attached screenshot).

I started double-clicking each of the boxes in the Registered Users row (fiddly! involves much clicking!). Once I had done this I clicked the delete button against the first user to whom permission had been explicitly granted (me), since this was now redundant. After clicking the button to confirm I did want to delete the row, the row had disappeared correctly, but the Registered Users had reverted to being red-crossed.

Attachments:

permission summary screenshot.PNG (81.3 K)

Tags: permissions, settings, permission, admin_console, save, revert, saved

Rob.Enslin 51 posts since

Sep 10, 2008 1. Re: Clicking delete button next to a row on Permission Summary screen loses any other changes Jul 3, 2009 8:59 AM

I assume if you click 'Remove' with the red circle on the far right hand side you'll remove the settings completely and be where you started (before you set up permissions)? Is that what you want to do with that space Michael?

Michael Pavey 49 posts since

Oct 3, 2008 2. Re: Clicking delete button next to a row on Permission Summary screen loses any other changes Jul 6, 2009 2:01 AM

Click Remove against which row?

I wanted to make the space public. So two changes were required:

Clicking delete button next to a row on...

- Remove the rows (not shown in the screenshot, they were already removed by this point!) explicitly allowing permission for two users
- Change the permissions for Registered Users to allow them permissions.

Making these changes in the order above would have been fine, but because I tried to make them in the reverse order (without knowing to click Save in between steps), I lost my work.

Karl Cyr 6,819 posts since

Mar 12, 2008 3. Re: Clicking delete button next to a row on Permission Summary screen loses any other changes Jul 6, 2009 9:52 AM

Hi Michael,

I understand your pain- the "Remove" action on the permissions page is an atomic operation, and will reset any unsaved changes to the permissions applied to other groups or users.

Fortunately, this page will be reworked in our next major release, and should not cause such difficulties.

Regards,

Karl

Michael Pavey 49 posts since

Oct 3, 2008 4. Re: Clicking delete button next to a row on Permission Summary screen loses any other changes Jul 7, 2009 1:32 AM

Brilliant news! Thanks Karl.